

Network diagram showing relationships between various bacterial species. The nodes are labeled with species names and accession numbers, and they are interconnected by numerous lines representing relationships. The network is dense, with many nodes and a high degree of connectivity. The labels include species names like Bacteroides, Clostridium, Lactobacillus, and others, along with their respective accession numbers such as ATCC, DSM, and others.